

GRACE NOTES

A grace note (♪) is played in two ways, depending on the style of the music.

1. In lively rhythmic pieces, play them as “crush” notes. That is, strike the grace note and the principal note exactly together. Then instantly release the grace note and keep holding the principal note. The composer, Franz Liszt, recommended this type of grace note playing.
2. In slower melodic pieces, play the grace note separately, just ahead of the principal note. The two notes are played one right after the other with a small accent on the principal note. The principal note is played on the beat.

15. CHINESE SERENADE

Note: Play grace notes as “crush” notes. See explanation above.

Con moto ♩ = 80-92

H. Fliege

The musical score for "15. CHINESE SERENADE" is written for piano. It is in 2/4 time and the key of D major (one sharp). The tempo is marked "Con moto" with a quarter note equal to 80-92 beats per minute. The composer is H. Fliege. The score consists of four systems of music. The first system begins with a "grace note p" instruction. The second system includes a "f" (forte) dynamic. The third system includes an "sfz" (sforzando) dynamic. The fourth system includes an "8va - 1" instruction and an "sfz" dynamic. The score features various musical notations including grace notes, accents, and fingerings.
