

Gavot

from First Book of Progressive Lessons

DUNCOMBE

[♩ = c.100]

Little is known of William Duncombe beyond the fact that he lived in London in the late 18th century and was organist of St Dunstan's, Highgate. His publications include two anthologies for students of the keyboard. Many of the contents are arrangements by Duncombe of already existing pieces – some traditional, others contemporary – rather than original compositions; and this may be true of the piece selected here. 'Gavot' is an old English spelling of gavotte, a French dance of the 17th and 18th centuries in moderate duple time. Crotchets might be lightly detached.
Source: First Book of Progressive Lessons for the Harpsichord and Piano Forte (London: J. Bland, 1778)