

Tarantella

B:1

Pauline Hall

Vivace [$\text{♩} = c.112$]

1. mf (repeat p)

2. mp

3. f

LH

Pauline Hall studied at the Royal Academy of Music before embarking on a teaching career. It was while she was teaching in Harrogate, North Yorkshire, that she felt the need for a piano tutor that made learning fun, while progressing at the pace of her slowest learner. She started by writing little tunes in pupils' notebooks, which formed the basis of her Tunes for Ten Fingers and from which her Piano Time series – from which 'Tarantella' is taken – was developed.

The tarantella is a folk dance from southern Italy in a quick 6/8 time. Dancing it was said to cure the bite of a tarantula, but the name of the dance is in fact derived from the town of Taranto.

© Oxford University Press 1989

Reproduced by permission. All rights reserved. All enquiries about this piece, apart from those directly relating to the exams, should be addressed to Oxford University Press, Music Department, Great Clarendon Street, Oxford OX2 6DP.